HISTORY

There is evidence of mining activity on the claims as early as 1904. According to the Yukon Ministry of Mines, the claims were placer mined between 1935-1939. Between 1983 and 1988 Dublin Gulch Placers, under the direction of Darrel Duensing and Larry Tremblay placer mined the main channel of the creek and reported 1,275 oz. of gold. Total production from the creek is expected to have been, in the order of, 5,000 oz. Kelli-Reed Creek Resources Ltd. acquired the claims and under the direction of geologist Gordon Gutrath, P.Eng., active exploration commenced on the claims in 2014. Sampling using a small sluice box on the edges of the previously mined area revealed a considerable quantity of course gold present. There is sufficient side pay to warrant further placer mining. The claims upstream from the mined area have not been explored or mined. Geochemical soil sampling of the quartz claims that surround the placer claims have revealed high anomalous gold values.
